Course Description

Modern European History will focus mainly on mid-twentieth century European history (1945-1989). As no event occurs in a microcosm, this course will also cover wider developments during this time period. In addition, students will study the effects of these events on developments up to the present day. Students will also examine primary and secondary historical sources, explore key themes, and be expected to master the chronology of events.

While this course will deal with Europe as a whole, central and eastern European history will be emphasized. Students will be asked to consider the perspective and motivations of various actors (individuals, groups, nations, or alliances) and to assess the value of different historical sources and approaches to writing history.

The aim of this course is to give students a deeper understanding of this region's history and provide some historical context for the contemporary political and philosophical writings that they may be asked to study in other courses at BISLA.

In addition to lectures, seminars, and discussions, students' written and oral communication skills will be developed through essays and presentations. Along with increased historical understanding, students will cultivate better critical thinking and analytical skills that can be applied in a range of academic and practical settings.

Evaluation Criteria

30% Active Participation, based on preparatory reading

30% Seminar Paper and Presentation

20% Examinations

20% Reflection Papers

Active Participation: It is absolutely necessary to come to class and participate on a regular basis. Participation includes attendance, reading preparation, and active discussion during seminars. You are allowed four unexcused absences, after which your grade will significantly decrease.

Seminar Paper and Presentation: Each student will choose an aspect of one of the main movements/themes that interests them. They will thoroughly research the topic and write an individual, analysis-based seminar paper of at least 2,000 words on their approved topic. As well as writing the paper, each student will present their research and lead a class discussion on the subject matter.

Examinations: There will be two examinations in this course, a midterm and a final examination. Both examinations are weighted equally. Each examination will cover the material since the previous one; the final examination will, therefore, not be comprehensive. Examinations will be based upon information from lectures, class discussions, primary source readings, the required readings, and any presentations given.

Reflection Papers: One to two page reflections on the previous two or three major themes/movements discussed (quality over quantity). You should briefly describe the movements, analytically compare and contrast them, and explain their impact to world history. Critical analysis is key.
